

INCARCERATED AND OWE CHILD SUPPORT? YOU MAY BE ENTITLED TO RELIEF.

The State of Maryland may suspend your child support obligation while you're incarcerated, if:

- You were sentenced to a term of imprisonment of 180 consecutive calendar days (six months) or more; and,
- You are not on work release and have insufficient resources to make child support payments.

WHAT DO I NEED TO DO?

Contact your local child support office and give them the following information:

- Your name, social security number and date of birth;
- Your inmate number, name and address of the institution where you are incarcerated;
- The date you were sentenced;
- The length of the sentence imposed by the court;
- Your address and phone number upon your release; and,
- The names of your children, the names of their parent(s), and your child support case number(s).

IS THERE ANY REASON WHY I MIGHT NOT QUALIFY FOR THIS RELIEF?

You do not qualify:

- If you are on work release;
- If you have sufficient funds to continue to make your child support payments; or,
- If you committed the crime with the intent of being incarcerated or otherwise becoming impoverished.

WHAT HAPPENS NEXT AFTER I CONTACT MY LOCAL CHILD SUPPORT OFFICE AND THEY DETERMINE I QUALIFY FOR THIS RELIEF?

Your local child support worker will adjust your account to reflect that payments are not currently due and will not become due until 60 days after your release from incarceration. In addition, your local child support worker will adjust your account so that your arrearages balance will not increase while you are incarcerated and for 60 days after your release.
